Outlook

The Alberta Occupational Demand and Supply Outlook (2006-2016), projects a supply shortage in the Finance and insurance clerk occupation beginning in 2011. The Insurance and real estate sales occupations and buyers occupation is expected to experience a supply surplus from 2006 to 2016.

Real estate industry in Alberta has been using different methods to purchase and advertise real estate. Increasing use of the Internet has created an alternative marketplace, where prospective buyers and sellers have been using online applications, rather than traditional methods such as real estate agents, lowering commission costs significantly. With increasing Internet literacy, and a lucrative housing market, look to see more individuals use the Internet as opposed to real estate agents.

Alberta should still expect a strong real estate market due to factors like oil sands development and low taxes in the province help sustain growth. However, Alberta may expect to see a decline in existing home sales from record levels held in 2006, yet still maintain its lead in the nation.
